Ellie the Little Elephant Learns to Make Things Right

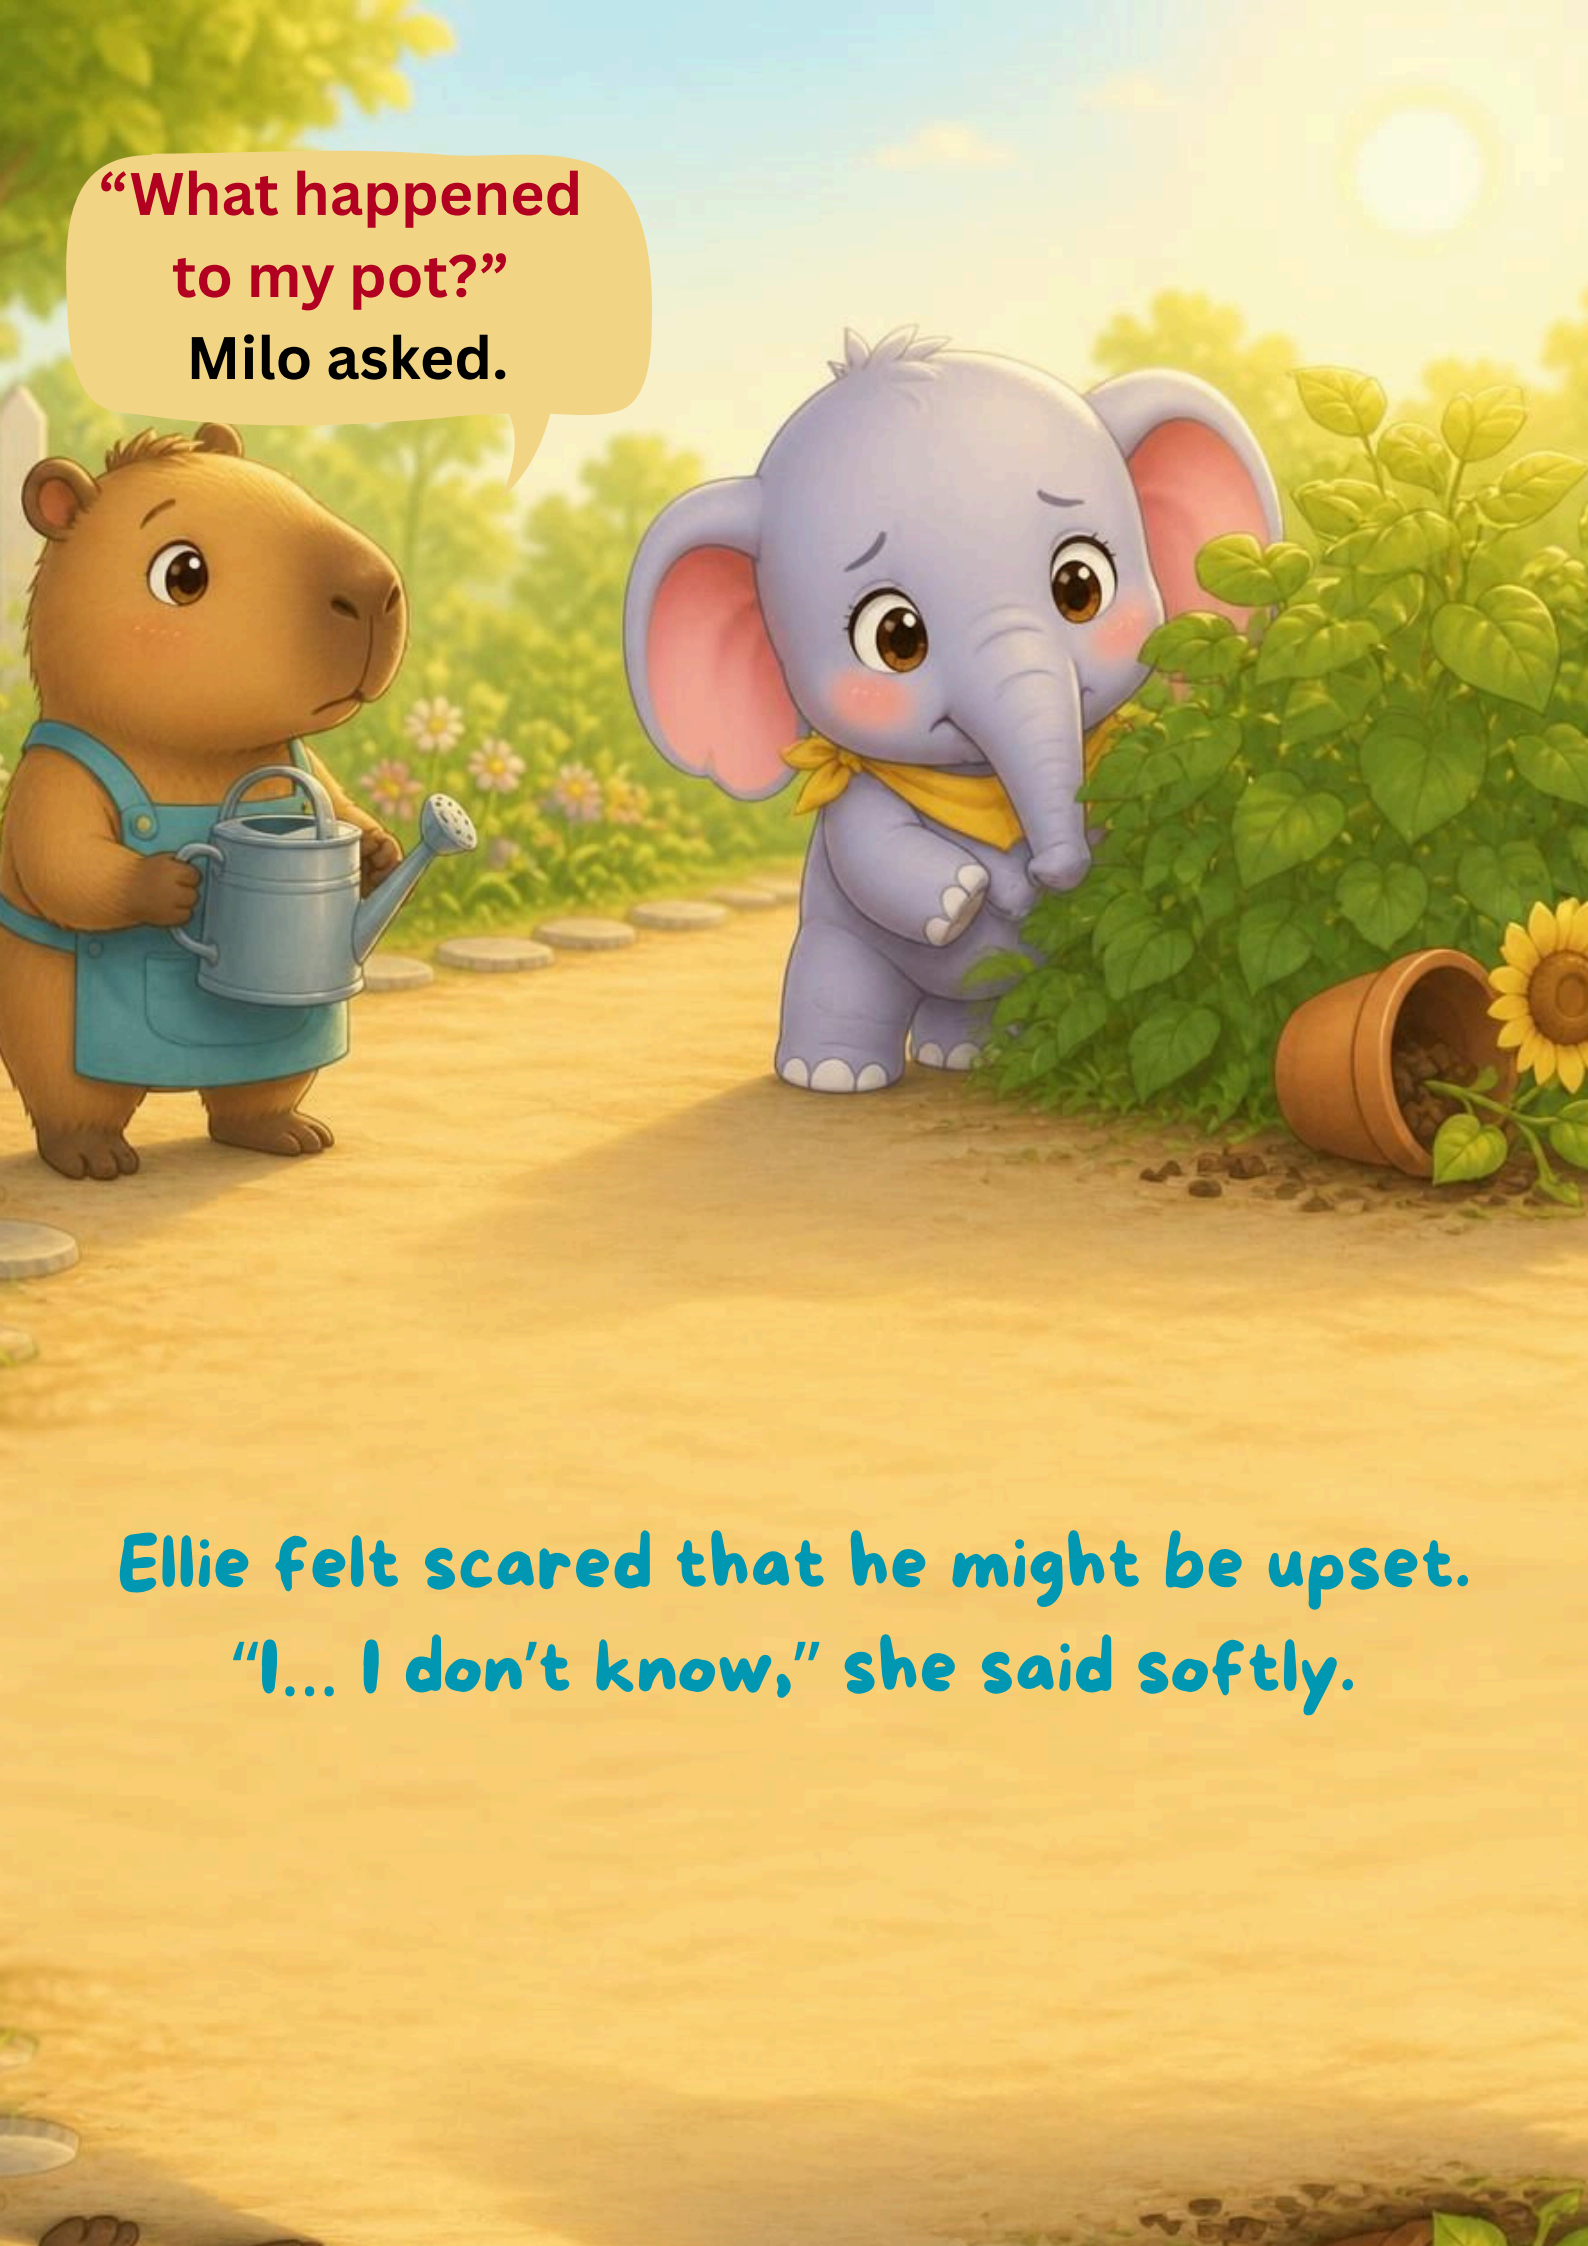

Ellie the little elephant loved Nana Olive's garden. Every morning she skipped down the path, her sunny-yellow neckerchief bouncing behind her. Ellie the elephant could hardly wait to help her friends plant flowers.

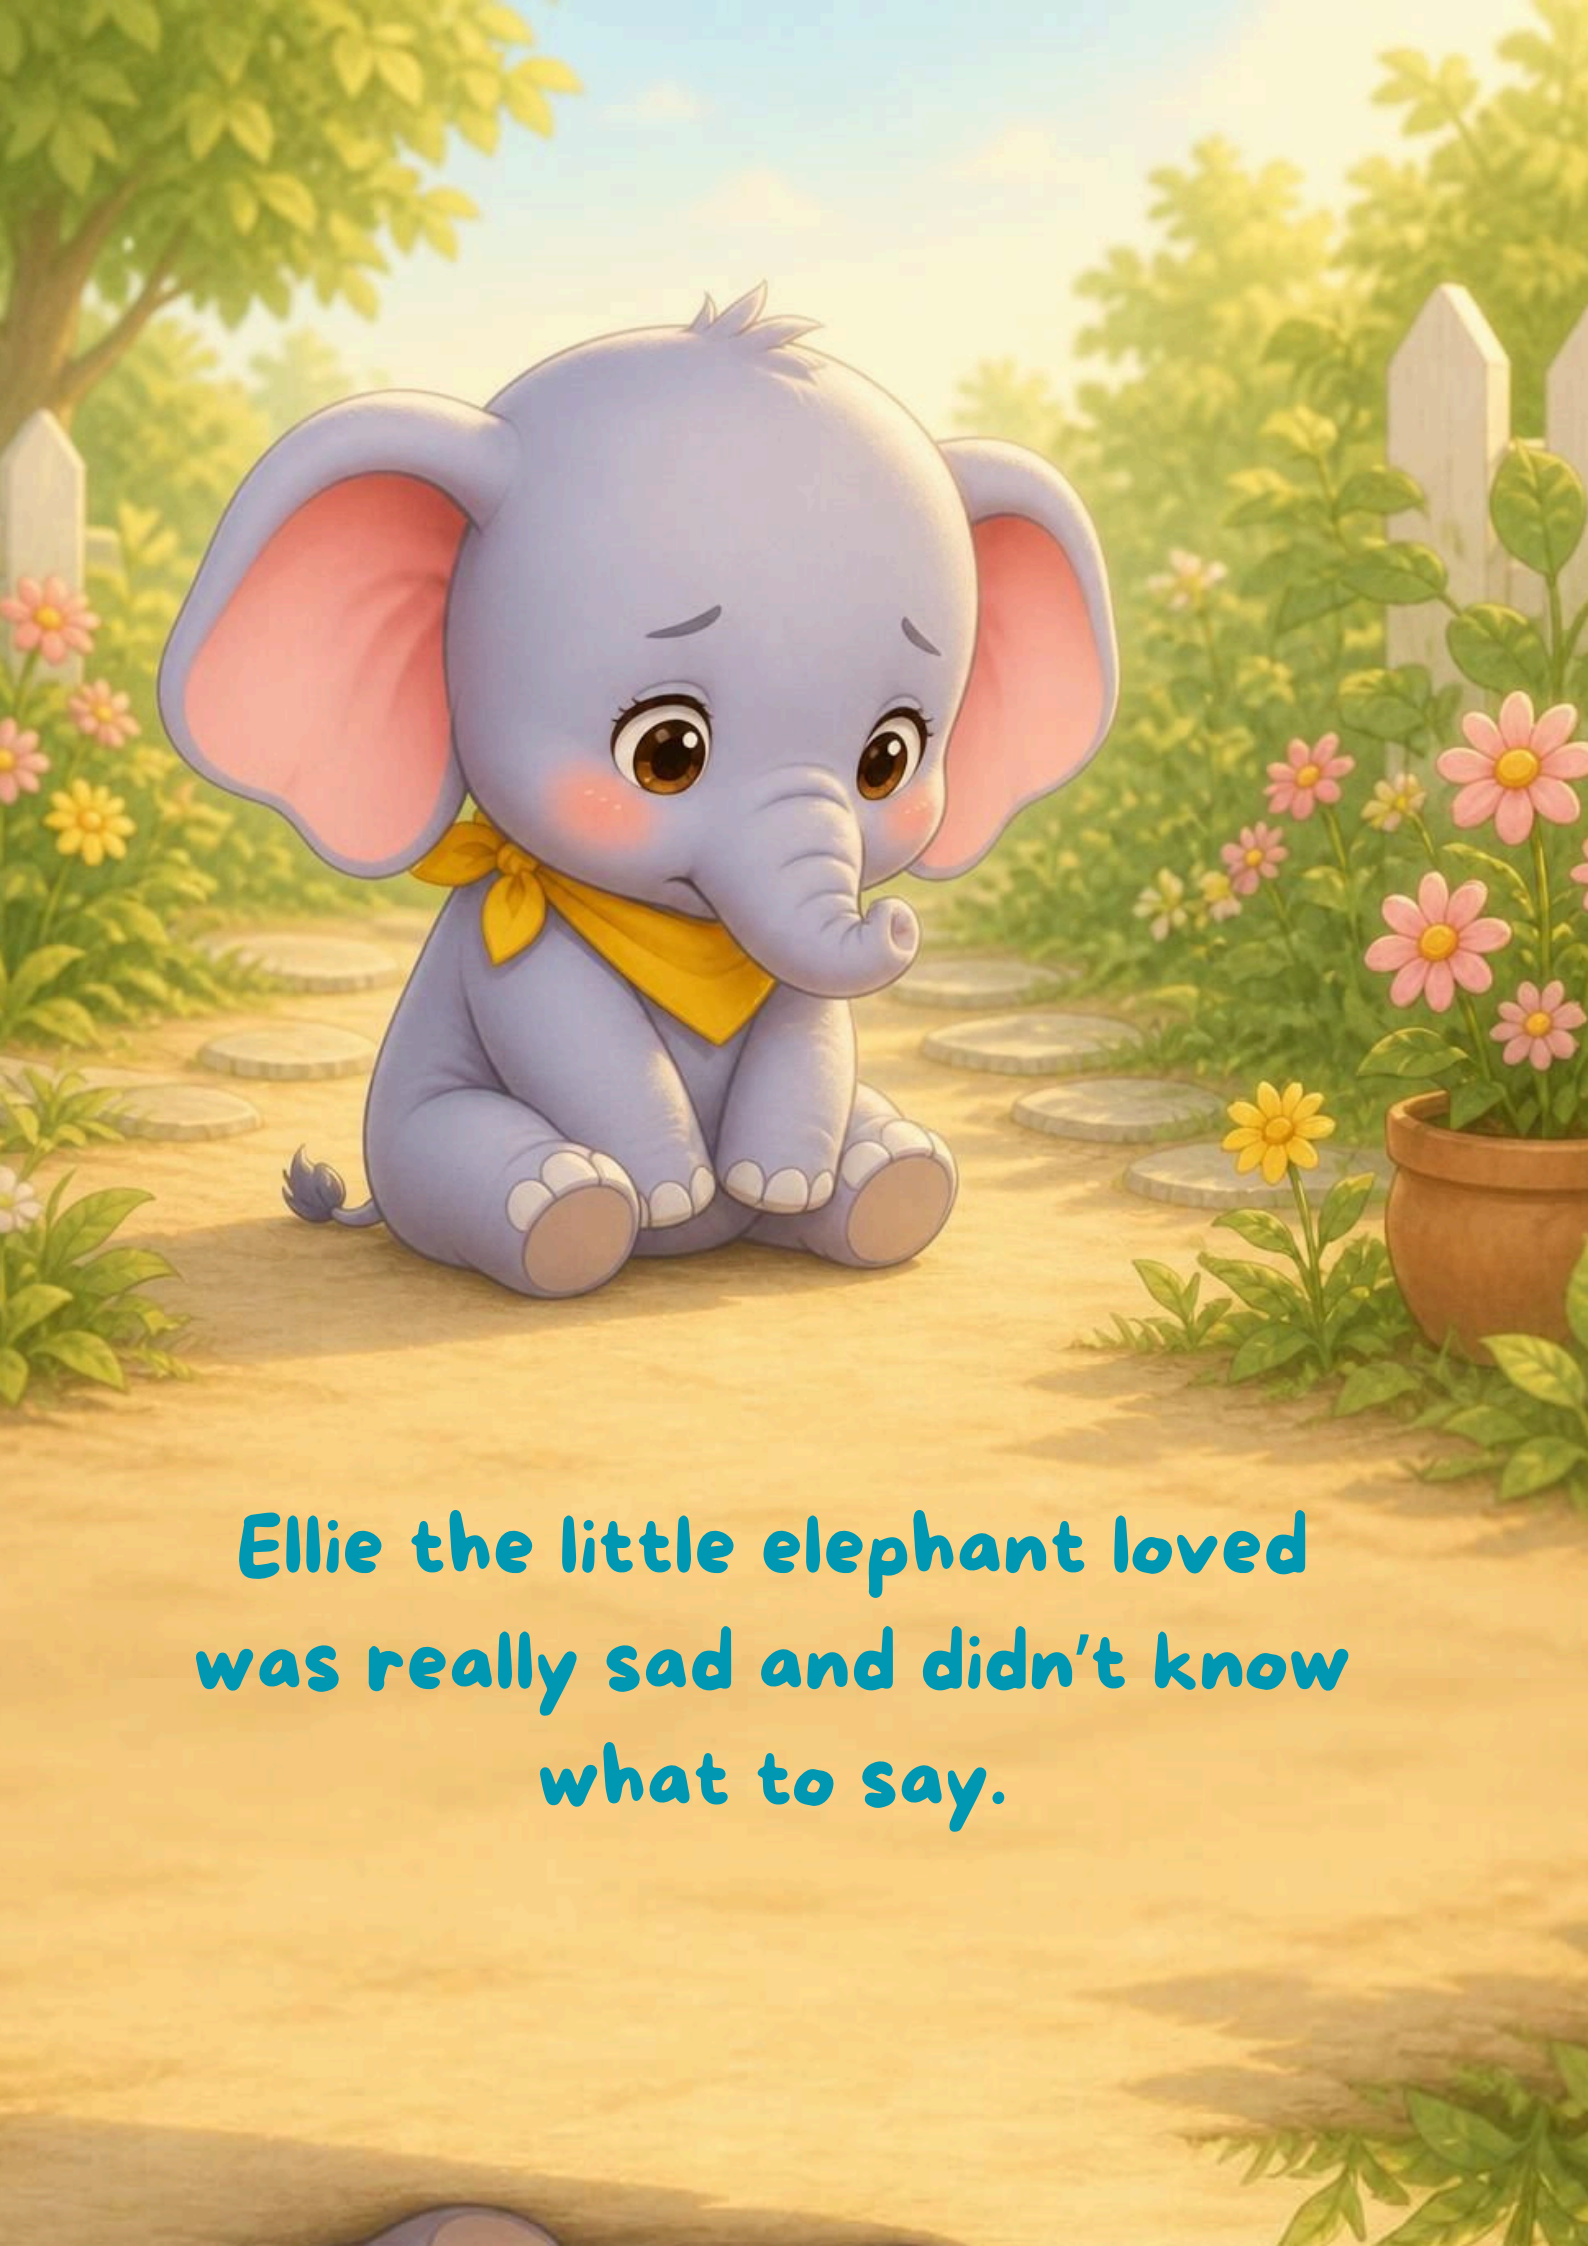

Milo asks Ellie to carefully move a small garden cart . Ellie looks proud and determined but still sweet and childlike.

Bump! The little wheel rolled over a stone.
The flowerpot tumbled down and broke.
Ellie's ears drooped.

Ellie felt scared that he might be upset.
“I... I don’t know,” she said softly.

Ellie the little elephant loved was really sad and didn't know what to say.

Nana Olive sat beside her. “Mistakes happen,” she said kindly. “Telling the truth is how we begin to make things right.” Ellie took a slow breath.

Milo took a breath. "Thank you for telling me, Ellie. I was sad about my pot." Ellie nodded. "I'm sorry. I'll help you plant the flower again."

Together, they filled a new pot with fresh soil and tucked the daisy inside. Ellie watered it carefully. The little flower stood tall, and the friends felt better.

Ellie learned that being honest can feel scary at first. But telling the truth, saying sorry, and doing your best to make things right can help trust grow again.
